

The Rosetta Stone Method

Rosetta Stone offers libraries and their patrons the proven immersion method that thousands of organizations have trusted for more than 25 years. The award-winning interactive approach has been used by millions of learners around the world and now is accessible through the library — anytime, from anywhere.

How it Works

Rosetta Stone's Dynamic Immersion method enables you to tap into your innate ability to learn a language. By mirroring the way you first acquired language as a child, Dynamic Immersion provides maximum exposure to your new language through audio spoken by native speakers, written words, and real-world images. You'll use visual and conceptual clues to help you interpret the meaning of new words, phrases, and sentences rather than relying on translations and rote memorization. Dynamic Immersion is a research-based approach to effective language learning that allows you to build a deeper, more enduring understanding of your new language.

What You Will Learn

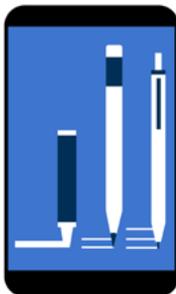

Speaking and Pronunciation

Each Rosetta Stone lesson starts with key vocabulary you will be asked to speak aloud. As you practice, TruAccent, Rosetta Stone's proprietary speech recognition software, compares your pronunciation to native speakers and offers immediate feedback. This means you'll learn how well you're saying each word, in addition to learning the word itself.

Listening Comprehension

As you work through lessons, you will hear words and phrases spoken aloud by native speakers and be asked to choose the image that corresponds. This immersive learning experience will help you to learn the language intuitively through imagery and reasoning instead of rote memorization as you build your listening skills.

Reading and Writing

Rosetta Stone starts by teaching common words, then moving through simple phrases, and finally forming complete sentences and ideas. With Stories and writing prompts, you can apply what you've learned through structured immersion, building ever-increasing reading and writing abilities in your new language.
